QUEEREST MEN ON EARTH

Wear No Clothes, While Few Leaves Satisfy Pride of Their Women

Earth's oldest and oddest race of men has been brought prominently into notice again through the widespread interest aroused by sending a batch of Indian political agitators to the penal settlement on the Andaman Islands, that beautiful coral-bound archipelago in the Bay of Bengal. This remnant of the most primitive human species in existence will soon be nothing but an ethnological memory. Contact with advanced civilization has been followed, as usual, with a train of infectious diseases which are steadily thinning the ranks.

Owing to the ancient course of trade, the Andamanese have been known about from the earliest times. Ptolemy's Agathian Daimones Nosos probably preserves the misunderstanding of some term applied by sailors to a place in or near the modern Andamans. Notices of them by travelers, Asiatic and European, are continuous from the seventh century, and the islands regularly appear in some shape on maps of those regions from the Middle Ages down.

The Andamanese live in a Hesperidian garden, where they toil not, neither do they spin. For the product of the spinner they have no use, as the men go stark naked and the women wear one or more leaves in front and a bunch of leaves tied around the waist behind.

The average height of the men is 58 inches and that of the women 54 inches. They appear to dwell free from care in a country that is everywhere beautiful and varied.

In the ordinary attainments of human beings, however unenlightened, the Andamanese are amazingly deficient. During all their ages of intercourse by word of mouth they have not developed a medium worthy of the name of language. Before the arrival of the British the tribes, except actual neighbors, had no intercourse. Even clans of the same tribe found difficulty in the details of dialogue with one another. There is a change of jargon every twenty miles of the coast. They have no words for ordinary greetings, salutations or expressions of thanks.

Such language as they have, however, is exceedingly interesting from the philological point of view. It possesses a quality which would be invaluable were the Andamanese a business people. In their speech only what is absolutely necessary is usually expressed. These wiles of humanity could do just as well probably without any words at all. They have an expressive sign language which they employ almost as much as the spoken words. Their speech is jerky, disjointed and helped out often by a grimace, a gesture or a sudden change in tone.

The Andamanese knows scarcely anything and has no desire to increase his stock of knowledge. He has never learned any sort of agriculture. Until the English taught him to keep dogs he did not know how to domesticate any animal or bird. He cannot count, even with his fingers, and doesn't see any need of counting. All his ideas are hazy and inaccurate.

On one point, however, he is level-headed. He belongs to a race of lad fighters, knows it, and will never attack unless certain of success.—Culcutta correspondence to the New York World.

excepting one. I have orders to keep nineteen of the clocks at exactly the correct time, but the little jeweled timepiece in the bedroom of the mistress of the house is to be kept three minutes fast. I suppose she has some special reason for that.

"No, I don't get rich at my business, but I make a living at it. The house I just spoke of is an especially profitable one, of course, having so many clocks. They pay me $100 a year for my attendance there, which is given weekly, as it is to all the places I visit."—New York Times.

YOUR MIND IS A MINE

Young man, your mind is a mine, but every mine has to be opened up by the expenditure of time, labor, and money before it will yield up its treasures. Unless you pursue a like course by means of careful study and persistent energy, the great possibilities of your mind will remain dormant.

It would be just as foolish to enter the business world and hope to succeed without a business training, as it would be to expect a mine to produce wealth for you without its being developed.

Do not put off the very important matter of training your mind, but begin at once to develop it so that it may in return produce for you a good income.

Let us tell you what you can accomplish in our school.
